In 2009, Justice 2000 and Community Advocates completed a plan to merge agencies, in order to better serve low-income and at-risk individuals.

The leadership of both Community Advocates and Justice 2000 recognized the compatibility of both organizations' missions.

Even more, the mutual advantages of combining services and resources provided sufficient reason to bring the organizations together.

This merger allows collaborative work to exert greater influence on public policies that affect the issues of poverty, healthcare, and criminal justice for the greater good of the entire Milwaukee community.
