As part of the process of negotiating and drafting the consent decree, the Attorney General's Office worked with community organizations to hold 14 Consent Decree Community Roundtables throughout Chicago. The purpose of these roundtables was to ensure that interested Chicago residents had a meaningful opportunity to provide their input on reform of CPD. The Attorney General's Office and the City then reviewed and considered all of the community input. In addition, the Attorney General's Office sought and obtained input on reform of the Chicago Police Department from CPD officers through 13 focus groups. The Attorney General's Office and the City also reviewed and considered this input as part of the process of drafting the consent decree.
